NEW SAFETY SIGN—Here is one of the many new green and white safety signs in baked enamel on steel which have been placed in Cone plants recently. These signs are for the purpose of giving definite instructions concerning the reporting of accidents and a brief safety message. These are placed so they may be seen by each employee every day. Shown here are Cloth Room inspectors, Mrs. Nellie Jarrett and Mrs. Helen Jordan, Proximity Plant.

SAFETY SUGGESTION—George Farrington, second shift employee, at White Oak Weave Room recently suggested a safety bar over the string winder at the quill skinner. This bar works against a cut-off switch and when a person pushes against it, he will cut the machine off before getting caught in it. (One person recently broke his arm on this machine.) Mr. Farrington received a cash award from Cone Mills Corporation for his idea.

186 Attend Banquet For Mothers And Daughters

One hundred and eighty-six mothers and daughters in the Cone Mills communities attended the annual Mother-Daughter banquet last Saturday night at White Oak YMCA. This year's event was attended by 70 more than last year's. The banquet will be at Proximity next year.

Speaking on the differences in girlhood today and 50 years ago, Mrs. Wallace Bourne, Jr. discussed the character traits she tries to teach her own three daughters. She spoke of the importance of teaching love for fellowman, respect, need of education, need to be domestic, making one's own choices, standing by one's own convictions, and loving God.

Receiving a four-place setting of china for having the largest number of daughters present was Mrs. Hobart Johnson, 1205 17th Street. Eight of her 10 daughters were present.

Mrs. D. W. Byers, Rt. 2, Brown Summit, won a set of Cone towels for having the eldest daughter present. Mrs. Lenice Clapp, 1202 Meadow Street, won a wall planter for having the youngest daughter present.

Prizes were awarded by Mrs. Frances Funderburk, women's activities director for Cone Memorial YMCA, sponsoring the banquet.

Mistress of ceremonies was Mrs. Frank Starling who made a brief speech of welcome to the group.

Mrs. John Medearis sang several solos, accompanied by Miss Betty Bryant. One of the songs was an original parody on Mother McCree with the daughter as the subject.

Tribute was paid to womanhood through poetry readings by Mrs. Nell Robinson, Mrs. T. H. Ward, Mrs. Merlin Beaver, Mrs. Elizabeth Sullivan, Mrs. Olan Oldham, Mrs. Marie Moore, Miss Judith Kendrick and Miss Lynda McQueen.

Door prizes were won by Mrs. Walter Stanley, Miss Pamela McAbie and Miss Patricia Wyrick.

White Oak Y's Men served the dinner. Frank Starling, Mutt Culbreth, W. O. Leonard, Jr., Cecil Elmore, Tom Ward, Jr., Howard Smith, Fred Amos, Harvey Gregory, Arthur Bailiff, Alton Wyrick, Cleo Pegram, Jack Phillips, Dick Yow, Sam Wheeler, Ernest Stephens and Olan Oldham.

Accident Repeaters Are Analyzed

An accident prone person may be defined as one whose basic, long term characteristics are such as to make him considerably more liable to injury than the average person. Such persons probably will not respond satisfactorily to the usual methods of training.

Failure to respond may be due to: (1) a generally low level of intelligence; (2) traits such as recklessness, stubbornness, violent temper, or excitability, which makes the worker difficult to educate and cause him to commit acts which he knows are unsafe; (3) lack of interest in any type work; (4) inability to get along with people which results in his dislike for his supervisor and leads him to ignore instructions.

To be distinguished from the maladjusted worker, but no less dangerous is the "accident repeater." This worker is not maladjusted in character, and may grow out of the accident "habit." The following may be causative factors for accident repeaters:

A. Physical inadequacies, such as defective eyesight or hearing, and lack of physical capacity for the job.

B. Temporary mental inadequacies, such as worry, fatigue and tension.

C. Characteristics such as distaste for the job, lack of will to work, dislike of supervisor or fellow workers.

D. Lack of sufficient manual skill to perform work promptly and accurately.

E. Correctable plant and machine hazards, such as machinery improperly designed or used, poor plant layout, lack of adequate safeguards, poor maintenance of machinery and equipment.

With good supervision such conditions may often be remedied by assigning the worker to a job which better fits his physical capacities, or letting him work under a different foreman, or correcting

Free Brunswick Stew Tomorrow!

Yes, that's right! Cone Post 386, American Legion is giving away Brunswick stew, tomorrow, April 2 at White Oak YMCA, beginning at noon.

One thousand gallons of stew are being made and a huge tanker is being used to store it in before it is distributed.

Are you still reading this article? If so, by now you must have realized the day: April first or April Fool's Day. So the above is just a big joke.

However it's no joke that Cone Post 386 is sponsoring a Brunswick stew tomorrow, April 2 at White Oak YMCA.

Legionnaires will work tonight and on through the early morning hours preparing the chicken, beef, pork and vegetables to be used in the stew.

Price will be 75 cents per pint; proceeds go to the Legion's building fund which is gradually growing larger.

Housewives are urged to forget about preparing lunch and dinner on Saturday and bring the family to the White Oak YMCA for several helpings of delicious Brunswick stew.

Clarence N. Cone Reports On Survey At Salisbury Plant

Clarence N. Cone, vice president of Cone Mills Corporation, spoke to employees of all three shifts at Salisbury Plant last Wednesday and explained that results of the recent survey by an outside agency has resulted in extensive planning for improvement in operation of Cone Mills.

Mr. Cone said that the survey of the Salisbury Plant had revealed that management is held in generally high esteem by the employees and had brought many valuable suggestions which are being considered on their merits.

He said that the company was starting a clean-up program in Salisbury to make the mill "a place we'll all be proud of and proud to have our families see." He told the employees that five additional smoking rooms would be built at the Salisbury Plant.

Other programs he described include enlarged parking facilities for employees, additional telephone service to the plant, first aid training for supervisors and improved washroom facilities.

The agency has been conducting the survey of employees and supervisors in Cone Mills since early last December. So far, eight plants have been inspected and the company's management has reported to employees results of the survey.

All school children will be given printed copies of this section of the ordinance within a few days, Williamson said. Registration will begin as soon as the tags, now en route to Greensboro, arrive here.

Reverend R. Murphy Williams

Among those called from the land of the living by the Omnipotent Being are many good and righteous men. Men of the cloth are human and therefore their lives on earth are not everlasting.

The passing of Reverend R. Murphy Williams shocks Greensboro and all who knew him, even though it was realized that a person of his age could not be with us too much longer. A consciousness that a most extraordinarily good Christian gentleman and spiritual leader has passed on does sincerely distress us all.

Not only did Reverend Williams meet all the tests of a righteous minister of the gospel, but he also possessed an unusual understanding of all phases of human behavior. He was deeply religious and yet he possessed a keen insight into the character, the weaknesses and the strength, of his fellowmen.

He capitalized on this broad, practical knowledge and truly practiced religion and inspired his fellowman in every walk of life wherever he went. Even during his many years of active service in the pulpit, his church was only his headquarters as his spiritual work extended to the byways and hedges.

As goodwill ambassador for Greensboro Industries, Inc. he performed an outstanding service which can be spelled out in the term of promoting "true brotherhood."

All through his many years of active participation in the real life of Greensboro he recognized all human beings as the sons of God. He was loyal to his particular church but he was even more loyal to the principles of true Christianity.

It is to be hoped that because of his great, stimulating and effective influence, others will have learned a great lesson in true brotherhood, and many, many more will practice his type of real religion.

DOGS

by Farley Manning

Keep The Puppy Plump

A healthy dog like a healthy person is well nourished, not fat; but a healthy young puppy like any other healthy infant should be definitely chubby, roly-poly, on the fat side.

The puppy can't produce bone and substance if he doesn't have something to produce it with, and that does not mean only daily nutriment, but an accumulation of flesh on his ribs.

Even dogs of the smallest design, as miniature as the Chihuahua, should have bone and substance; one may weigh no more than two or three pounds but it should nevertheless be "all dog." And the same is true of the streamlined canine models, the various-sized and various-coated members of the general greyhound family. None should look gaunt, hollow-cheeked and ewe-necked or be washboard-ribbed. And whatever will be their final size and silhouette at maturity, while dogs are still young puppies they should be plump.

There need be no fear that a puppy will eat so much it will grow oversize. While it is true that a starveling puppy will be stunted, same as an always-undernourished child, a well-fed puppy will grow as tall as the shoulder but no taller than is dictated by the physical history of its ancestors.

It is usually puppies of the toy breeds that may be underfed because of an owner's fear that the pup will grow too big. The fear is groundless.

The easiest rule for a novice owner to follow as to what to feed the first puppy that has come to a household, is to remember that in every important respect a puppy is almost identical with an infant child.

Both need milk regularly at least until their second teeth are fully grown. The best grade commercial dog foods are fine for the puppy but the prepared baby foods are also good items of a puppy's diet. Sweets, spices, and an over-abundance of tidbits are good for neither.

Each should be fed regularly; the puppy as much as it will readily eat four times a day up to at least age four months, and three times a day until after six months, but not between meals.

On Friday night, the Go Getters swamped the Lucky Five team three games, to further insure their top position in league standings. Jean Gregory was high with a 261 set, and a 97 game.

For the Lucky Fivers, Doodie Wood's 237 set was high, with Minnie Wood running second with a 235.

plant and machine hazards.

When a new man reports to work, he brings with him certain abilities and mental attitudes which will have definite influence upon the manner in which he performs the job and also on the manner in which he will respond to suggestions for improvement in his working methods.

On the other hand, the appearance of his new working environment will also influence his performance. His first impressions are important. If a new man walks into a shop which is dirty and disorderly, if he sees hazardous machinery, or notices men working on machines with guards inoperative, he is not likely to take seriously any suggestions which he may receive as to safe-work methods. Disorderly and unsafe conditions likewise make it difficult for the foreman to convince old employees that he is serious in his campaign for safety. If he really wants to obtain his men's cooperation in the safety effort, he must do his utmost to maintain good housekeeping and to see that all machinery is guarded.

Every individual possesses certain desires to which appeal may be made in the furtherance of safety. In stimulating these desires, the means should be carefully devised to appeal to such traits of character as: ambition, pride, sense of responsibility, sense of loyalty, imagination, etc.

Though some men respond readily to an appeal to pride, others react slightly, if at all. Some respond quickly to ridicule, yet others may resent it and even act against it. This is where good psychology is useful. The foreman has a small audience; he can address each individual separately, shaping his appeal to the traits of character and desire strongest in the person whom he is addressing at the moment. Furthermore, the good foreman is well aware of the stimulus to use in each case.

Sunday at 2:30 p.m., WFTV-TV presents "The Triumph of the Cross," an Easter cantata performed in Channel 2's studios. Dablaux, pictures, and music will unfold the wonderful and unforgettable story of Christ's triumph and his Resurrection from the grave.

The lives and loves of the fiery Olympian gods, the ancient heroes of Greece and Troy are seen in perhaps literature's greatest work, The Iliad of Homer. "Omnibus," at 5:00 o'clock this Sunday, undertakes one of television's most ambitious projects when Alistair Cooke and a cast of Broadway actors perform the classic only an hour and a half (the original Iliad, it is said, took 20 hours!) Paris, prince of Troy and Menelaus, ruler of a Greek kingdom, love the same woman—Menelaus' wife. And the woman is of course, Helen of Troy, whose beautiful face "launched a thousand ships." Achilles, the Greek hero; Hector, son of King Priam of Troy; the beautiful and mad princess Cassandra; Apollo, the romantic god; and Athena, goddess of wisdom and war; and Zeus, mighty ruler of the gods; are all seen in the immortal story of love and war which took place many thousands of years ago—and takes place again on "Omnibus!"
